A part of my business is to ascertain from personal observation the action of tertilizers, now used to some extent both in cotton and corn culture, as well as grasses. The results so far are quite sat-isfactory. I propose in my next to give the names of parties using it, the manner of applying the same and the difference between the plant fertilized and that unfertilized. I find a growing disposition on the part of some of our most intelligent and prosperous farmers toward a diversity of crops. They tell me that the present mode of farming is fast impoverishing their lands, the owner of the soil becoming poorer and poorer every year; and such will continue to be the case so ong as the system of constant cropping year prevails, taking everything from the land and returning nothing to it. You will please excuse me for writing so lengthy an article. In my next I hope to make it more interesting, giving you the condition of crops in the different

The temperance people have placed a fere with the personal or religious rights ilization. Nor is this all that can be said on so grave a subject. Fallacious arguments are used to show that prohibiting by law the sale or manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors does not necessarily prevent a citizen from drinking if he will; and that therefore he is deprived of no rights. But such a law does interfere with him; for while it does not deprive him of the means of buying it buy.
